EVERYDAY FASHION

More and more people are talking about luxury and not only fashion. This terminology indicates a substantial change in the sector in the recent years. Nowadays, fashion companies no longer sell clothes for people to cover themselves but sell a lifestyle, a way of being. Clothes and accessories have become tools to express identity.

Simultaneously, the focus of attention shifts from the intrinsic characteristics of the product to what it represents. Essentially, a new competitive arena is created in which companies win or lose on the basis of creativity, innovation and brand strength and are called upon to enrich objects with symbolic values regardless of the traditional requirements of rarity and exclusivity. It is a highly profitable strategy for companies, which involves trading-up, a purchasing behavior increasingly widespread among consumers willing to pay a premium price to get possession of products of superior quality and high emotional content.

Fashion fade Style is eternal

The term in an unornamental sense, fashion is a form of self-expression and autonomy. It is not just restricted to clothing and accessories but the whole lifestyle in a broader sense. As the time change, fashion also tends to mold its form, which is a subject for change.

LIFE IS ALL ABOUT CHOICES

A scarf, plural scarves, is a piece of fabric worn around the neck or head for warmth, sun protection, cleanliness, fashion. They can be made in a variety of different materials such as wool, linen, silk or cotton.

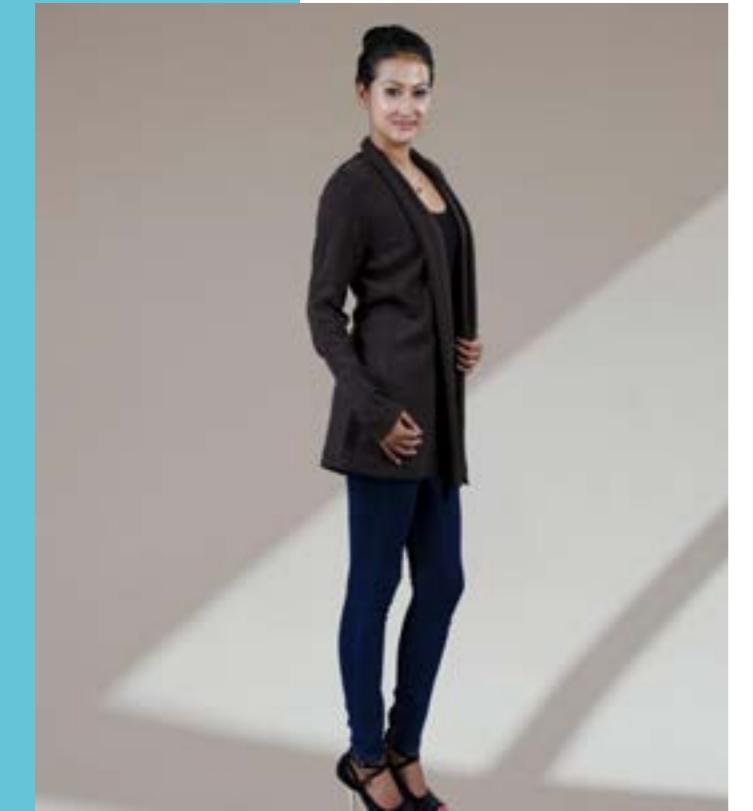

Cashmere is a natural fiber known for its extremely soft feel and insulating properties. Cashmere fibers are very fine and delicate, and almost feel like silk to the touch. Cashmere is significantly warmer and lighter than sheep's wool, and is somewhat similar to mohair, which is made from angora goats.

CARIAGGI

FINE YARNS COLLECTION

We only use 100% two ply pure cashmere from the exclusive Cariaggi Fine Yarns Collection.

A guarantee for outstanding softness and durability.

Luxury Yarn Supplies

One of our most important operating principle is to choose the best fabrics for each design, and the Cashmere Collection wa no exception. Whilst this is one of the most luxurious materials, not all cashmere is created equal. Softness, insulating capacity, durability all piling will vary greatly between great cashmere and cheaper alternatives

This is why we selected Cariaggi to be our only supplier. With almost 60 years of experience and three generations of successful product research and innovation, Cariaggi is known as the most prestigious spinning in the world. The extreme quality of Cariaggi's yarns starts with a careful selection of the best fibres of Capra Hircus Laniger from Inner Mongolia. Here the extreme changes in temperature between day and night causes the growth of a "duvet", a fibre with exceptional thermoregulatory qualities, that protects both from the lowest and the highest temperatures.

KANCHAN CASHMERE

The fibres selected can reach an average length of 40 mm and a finesse with a micron of 15.5.

Cashmere wool, usually simply known as cashmere, is a fiber obtained from cashmere goats, pashmina goats, and some other breeds of goat. It has been used to make yarn, textiles and clothing for hundreds of years.

Cashmere is known for being one of the softest fibers in the world. Its thin hairs mean that it can be woven into incredibly soft, luxurious garments and it's long lasting, but it comes at a cost.

Cashmere is a type of wool that is made from the hair of a certain type of goat native to the Gobi Desert and Central Asia. Long considered to be one of the softest and most luxurious types of wool in existence, cashmere is highly prized as a material for sweaters, scarves, and other light cold-weather gear

Dating back to the 18th Century, cashmere has been regarded as one of the world's most luxurious, warm and soft natural fibres. Our cashmere comes from Mongolian mountain goats whose fleeces are thick and warm enough to protect and insulate them through the icy winter and temperatures as low as -40C..

Premium cashmere is made from the long hairs of goats—and it's combed, never sheared. Shearing yields shorter fibers that are prone to pilling. Before you buy, rub the surface of a garment with the palm of your hand and see if fibers begin to roll up and/or shed.

Is cashmere eco friendly?

Here's the good bit: cashmere is biodegradable and a renewable resource. As far as materials go, it is more eco-friendly than some others.

Cashmere is ideal for infants (skins) What is one of the primary distinctions between cashmere and wool? Cashmere is hypoallergenic since it doesn't contain lanolin. It can be worn adjacent to the skin because it isn't irritating. And because of that, you may confidently wrap adults as well as newborns in it. adults with skin as soft as a newborn, too.

There are just three colors for cashmere. Just three colors, you read that correctly. Grey, brown, and white fibers are available. We only use colours that don't harm your health or the quality of your fibers. Because there are more than a thousand colors available since the Maisons's founding, you can gladly cover yourself in any shade you like.
